Thelma H. Bell was a children's book author, known for her novel "Yaller-Eye." The story follows the protagonist Randy Reed, who lives in the Carolina setting. The book is about a one-eyed cow named Yaller-Eye, who loses a paw in a groundhog trap and her future is in jeopardy. Bell's works often include elements of the South Carolina setting and feature animals and their interactions with people. The novel "Yaller-Eye" was published in 1951 by The Viking Press.